Manager's Report

Dear Customers – Our Friends and Our Neighbors,

In a few days, our nation will celebrate Abraham Lincoln's birthday. His dedication, perseverance, courage and spiritual strength are an inspiration to all of us.

Below is Lincoln's two-minute Gettysburg Address in which he referred to the events of the Civil War and described the ceremony at Gettysburg as an opportunity not only to consecrate the grounds of the cemetery, but also to dedicate the living to the struggle to ensure that "government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

"Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

"But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead who struggled here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

—Abraham Lincoln

Until next time, have a great day.
